

Do you experience
freezing
temperatures in your apartment
over the winter?

In the summer,
are you left
sweltering in the heat in your own home?

Researchers at Columbia University's Mailman School of Public Health are looking for residents of apartment buildings to participate in a study investigating indoor temperatures.

Participants will have two small temperature sensors installed in their home, which will record temperatures from this winter season until the end of summer 2024.

Each household will be compensated $50 for their participation.

To express interest, scan the QR code.

Must be 18+ to participate.
